

THE SO-CALLED FAIR ORDINANCE IS AN UNFAIR ROLLBACK FOR RENTERS.

A proposed law called the "FAIR Ordinance" would roll back renter protections in Chicago.

Protection	Current law (RLTO)	Protecting Renters Ordinance	"FAIR Ordinance" Counterproposal
Just cause to end or refuse renewal of a tenancy A landlord must have a valid reason before forcing a tenant to move.	 Not required	 Adds it	 Leaves it out
Clear eviction defenses when a landlord violates the rules Tenants can raise notice, cause, or relocation violations in court.	 Limited / implied	 Strong	 Removes some defenses
Relocation help for no-fault displacement Requires moving assistance when a tenant is forced to move from no fault of their own.	 Not required	 Adds it	 Leaves it out
Tiered notice before rent increases Current law requires 30, 60, or 120 days depending on tenancy length.	 30 / 60 / 120 days	 Strengthens to 120 days	 Keeps notice rules but weakens the remedy
A remedy when a landlord gives a late non-renewal notice Notice protects a renter only when ignoring it has a consequence.	 Tenant may stay through notice period	 Keeps protections	 Removes the practical remedy
Security deposit and junk-fee limits Caps and transparency for upfront costs.	 No ban	 Stronger	 Partial
Citywide rental registry and public enforcement A way to track rental units and repeat violations.	 No registry	 Adds tools	 More limited and unfunded
Codify a Chicago eviction-defense program Helps renters get legal advice or representation when they are at risk of eviction.	 No dedicated program	 Creates a Chicago-based program	 No dedicated program
